

Bio 135 Lab: Directional terminology and body systems.

Self study lab.

- This material is independent study for lab on the Leestown campus.
- Since they constitute much of the materials in chapter one of your text. These materials will be used as part of the first lecture exam.
- You may be quizzed on this material during second lab meeting.

- Goals
 - Learn directional and regional terminology for the body.
 - Learn the body cavities and what they contain
 - Learn the anatomical position.

- Related assignments:
 - Watch the video that is linked in the lab website.
 - You are to learn all terminology outlined in chapter one of your textbook.
 - Chapter one contains all the terminology you need to know. Materials on the website that go beyond that in your text are there for information purposes only.
 - Access virtual lab site and use the materials there to further clarify the terminology.

Summary:

- Return the labeled image at the beginning of your lab the week of January 24-28.
- You are expected complete these activities independently.
- These materials may be quizzed on in subsequent labs, used as part of the first lab exam and the first lecture exam.

Other activities associated with your first lab.

Lab orientation

Go online and take your lab safety quiz

Next week's lab is over Microscopy, and mitosis. Watch the video on your lab website. You will be quizzed over this during the week of January 24-28

Edited 12-8-2011 snyder.